

Leslie Mouton (born 1965) is a television news anchor and public speaker.

Leslie Mouton is the weekday co-anchor of Good Morning San Antonio between 4:30 a.m-7:00am.^[1] for KSAT-TV news, the ABC affiliate in San Antonio, Texas. She also co-anchors the extended news version from 9-10am She has been a broadcast journalist since 1988 and has worked at KSAT since 1999.

In October 2000, at the age of 35, Mouton was discovered with a very aggressive form of breast cancer. She allowed cameras to follow her during the entire treatment process which included surgery, chemotherapy and radiation therapy.

To bring awareness to the disease and offer encouragement and support to other women suffering from it, Mouton anchored a newscast without her wig on in order to reveal the hair loss that had resulted from the treatment process. The resulting attention landed Mouton on Good Morning America, Weekend Today, and Oprah. Newspapers worldwide as well as television programs Inside Edition and Primetime featured stories about her struggle.

Mouton continues to speak publicly about her disease in an effort to educate women about the importance of self-exams and early detection.

Her story is included in the book The Breast Cancer Book of Strength and Courage which features individual chapters written by survivors. The book's proceeds go to education and research for breast cancer. A PBS documentary on the book features Mouton and her family.

Leslie has been awarded The Congressional Action for Cancer Awareness Award, The Macy's Heart and Soul Award, The Headliner award, Women in Communication Media Award, American Cancer Society Media Award, The Jaycee's Award for One of the 10 Most Outstanding Young Texans.

Mouton is married to retired Air Force pilot Major Tony Mattox. They have one daughter Nicole Danielle Mattox.
